Attendance:

ADA Presentation - Teresa Eichner

Ms. Teresa Eichner, Chief of Public Information, informed the Committee and the public that the Administration issued notification in February that City webpages and uploaded documents must be ADA compliant.

Ms. Eichner stated that adjustments to the City Council webpages were required to bring them into ADA compliance, and that doing so would require making Legislative Gateway inaccessible to the public for a period of four to six weeks. She noted that staff would have access to the webpage via credentials circulated by her. She further noted that agendas and minutes would continue to be posted and accessible to the public.

CM Johnson asked whether there would be a way for the public to access legislative documents while Legislative Gateway was inaccessible. Ms. Eichner stated that credentials were being created internally for staff to access the system. She stated that during the period of inaccessibility, the public would need to submit records requests to either herself, Ms. Rhonda Hall Patrick, or the Legislative Services Division. CM Johnson asked whether the system containing legislation prior to 2019 would be consolidated with the current system. Ms. Eichner stated that the systems would not be consolidated.

Resiliency and Compound Flood Model Presentation - Anne Coglianese

Ms. Anne Coglianese, Chief Resilience Officer, presented on Resiliency and the Compound Flood Model, covering the Office of Resilience's compound flood modeling work, land development regulations, and continuing and new initiatives contributing to the City's resiliency.

CM Carlucci asked Ms. Coglianese about the importance of the City's participation in the Northeast Florida Regional Council. Ms. Coglianese stated that the challenges Jacksonville faces are also regional challenges. She stated that the City could take every possible measure to prevent wildfires in Duval County, but without coordination with neighboring counties, Duval County could still be affected. CM Carlucci noted the importance of regional resilience efforts and encouraged members to keep the Regional Planning Council in mind during the upcoming budget cycle.

CM Amaro asked how and when the City's improved ability to assess risk would translate into better protection. He further noted that Ms. Coglianese had referenced legislation during her presentation and asked her to explain what upcoming legislation was anticipated. Ms. Coglianese stated that her office had been working with the Planning Department on proposed legislation to update the City's land development regulations. She stated that the legislation would create incentives for developers to build at greater heights and higher densities in strategic locations. Ms. Coglianese stated that better protection would come more slowly for the City than for other cities such as Miami or Charleston, which were building large seawall projects. She stated that Jacksonville's risks were more diverse, requiring incremental improvements over time.

CM Carlucci asked how much flooding risk was mitigated by the Riverfront Parks and how much water a single large oak tree absorbed. Ms. Coglianese stated that during a major storm such as Hurricane Irma, waters would rise and then fall, and that the goal was to minimize disruptions. She stated that her office had worked closely with Parks Department staff to design parks along the riverfront with flood resiliency in mind. Ms. Coglianese stated that she did not know the exact volume of water absorbed by a single mature oak tree but noted the value of mature trees compared to newly planted trees, citing their contributions to cooling and stormwater absorption.
